Here it is, fall already. Kids are back in school and it's September. Where did summer go? Can you believe we are starting on our 5th year here at the shop? Where has that time gone?

We are deep in the planning for the 2009 Shop Hop - "A Quilters Party." Our quilt is finished and at the quilters. I'm pretty excited as our quilt is very bright and whimsical. Can't wait to get the binding on it and hung so you all can see it!!

I can finally indulge in every quilting whim that strikes me now as I "need" that for a store model. For example, we got a new book last week called Fat Quarter Quilting. I poured over the book several times and decided I liked everything in it. What's really cool is that every project in the book is the size of a fat quarter, and who doesn't have loads of them lying around? I needed to narrow it down to one or two projects to make as I have realized I do have "time issues". I picked a really cute fall project that has maple leaves, pumpkins and a sunflower. The very next day I raced into my sewing room and got everything cut out before I had to be at the store. Then Sunday I sat down to sew and by evening I had actually finished the top and even started to hand quilt it. Life is good if I can just sit and sew a bit every day!

As we move on into our 5th year I have so many new things planned. I will be attending Fall Market in Houston so I'm sure I will find all sorts of cool stuff to bring back with me. Right now I'm ordering fabric for a new block of the month designed by This & That which will start after the first of the year. I've also ordered fabric and patterns for Back to Nature by Timeless Treasures that finishes out into a queen sized quilt. There will be more information on these two blocks of the month later.

Well I haven't touched a sewing machine yet today so I think I'll go take a few stitches before I start my day! Happy stitching!! ~Lisa
